

Evidence Card for Investigator #5 – the desert/Bedouin encampment

Bedouins are Arab people of the desert regions. They were originally nomadic people, living in tents and raising livestock, primarily goats and camels used for dairy products, meat, wool, and transportation. Today Bedouins have mostly given up their nomadic lifestyle. Some of them operate tourist camps, like that in Wahiba Sands, shown here. While tourists can ride the camels, the Bedouins themselves are more likely to be found in four-wheel drive jeeps.
